Yo.....we are really going places with plasterite.....very PROFOUND .!

A very late update...confirmation....
plasterite broadcasters, for the electricity grid appears to deter insects in the home.!!!
After setting up the first broadcaster, I noted I was no longer plagued with ants trailing in after any scraps, even while preparing a meal !...I quizzed my research mate . He thought a while and confirmed he hadn;t had ant problems for a while too, then tried to analise other reasons...ha ha...typical !
The mate I lobbed in with, on the Queensland coast, similarly has had no ant problems since his broadcaster was set up last Christmas.....he took me around and showed the trails and holes in the building , that the boys used to regularly poison to no avail or temporary relief.
I posted the same on Orgoniteplus forum and Josh replied, not only ants, but fleas (brought in by pets) and cockroaches too !!!

So...orgone field in house...energising the electricity grid and now insect repellant....how good is that ??? !!!

I've made and gifted more than a dozen of these beauties...easy, cheap and very effective .
The brown models below are painted with shellac as a natural protective layer....but not necessary..

Cheers .....enjoy

Recently knocked up 3 more plaster broadcasters.
One went to a lady in the neighbourhood.
who is plagued by ants...she was somewhat sceptical, but ants seem to be thinning out.....we'll see what happens.
Regardless, the whole electrical grid is getting a cleanup. !
The other two awaiting new homes.

the bare one was a bit wonky...the traffic cone had been run over a couple of times resulting in a non symmetrical cone....Still works well

Here;s the ingredients

Along with water and casting plaster was beachsand, a three inch quartz point, a little orgonite cone and a couple of little resin life pillow pocket pieces.
Also a handful of mixed beads...quartz family,
I found the plaster and sand mixed to a fluffier consistancy by stirring/vortexing counter rotating clockwise, then counterclockwise, and repeating for about 3 minutes, before pouring into the mould in one go..,,,the orgonite cone in straight away, followed by the mixed beads , then the quartz point about 2 minutes later as the mix began to thicken, then resin pllow pucks that had to be pushed down a bit,

After about 15 minutes I scrape a bevel around the edge of the mould,
This helps stop breakage of the edged later when demoulded.

Easy to make,,,great results for household and community
,,,,can even breakdown formulae to simplest , plaster, beachsand and water.

Just plug in the power point, the other end into something that is on all the time,,,24 / 7
A fridge, entertainment unit, clock radio , whatever.
The broadcaster will create a strong but pleasant orgone field .
Cheers

gr8 work monsoon .... would you be able to give us the proportion of plaster (I believe you are talking of 'plaster of paris' that is used in halse ceilings) to sand. Won't you need metal shavings or anything else.
What about waterproofing it?

G'day ashishmazmudar...yes.....plaster of paris..or casting plaster , for every 3 cups of plaster, a cup of sand though often put a bit more sand in...no metal shavings needed though have used copper powder in a few mixes and turned the plaster a faint green tinge when I waterproofed a cone for outdoor use..I painted several layers of polyester resin, letting harden in between coats

Great thread Monsoon, I'd not heard of plasterite before, I've been wanting to make orgonite for some time but can't get swarf around here.

Instead I have collected some old electric motors with a view to cutting off the copper windings as a substitute, but now I've seen your work it looks like a better way to go

Have you or anyone you know built Chem Busters with plasterite ? If so how did you get on ?

Cheers

G'day Spiral...
A bloke from the states (gifter) sent me some photos of his CB's he had problems with posting photos ...a couple of them had plasterite as the base and gave huge a bovis reading...the reference is in pages 3 and 4 of the thread below...cutting edge stuff !!

http://orgoniteplus.net/Forum/viewtopic.php?f=5&t=849

It's a great idea and would certainly be cheaper to construct...

Might just have to give that one a go when finished traveling

Thanks Monsoon, Its going to take me a while to get up to speed with all that, its gone way past the Croft stuff I was aware of.

Just one thing, what is a "Bovis meter" and where can I get one ?

Yeah good one....wish I could buy one too ha ha.

No, it's done using a pendulum .....dowsing !
I think they use a chart with different scales.
remember reading or seeing it in the orgoniteplus.net forum somewhere

Oh ! well we've got a few of those, makes sense really now you come to say so.

Is it possible to dowse sand to see if it contains quartz, as there are other crystalline rocks that would look the same , such as feldspar ?

Dowsing with a pendulum , for me is easy...first found out you could sex seeds, when I was into biodynamic agriculture...a female, or strong producing seed spins the pendulum clockwise, a male or less productive seed gives a back and forth motion. A dead seed....no movement Later I needed to find which end of a quartz was the positive point and read somewhere to try a battery to get which spin of the pendulum was positive.
For me it turned out in both cases that positive spins CW , negative CCW or back and forth.

All my orgonite spins CW
Plasterite spins CCW
Not sure what the means but I find it very interesting
I should hunt up a Bovis chart and play
I'm in the southern hemisphere,,,,apparently it's the opposite in the NH

The Life Pillow , like plasterite, spins CCW and by passing the LP over orgonite changes the spin to CCW ...!

Similarly it changes the spin (to less harmful) of food and water etc.....Ref: viewtopic.php?f=11&t=3590

So....with the pendulum..you can ask questions , the answer giving either a positive or negative spin....by holding over the target
Best way is to try a AA battery or similar to find which way the positive end spins for you.....then you are away !

Cheers
